HURRY UP PROGRAM FOR T. B. TESTING

OUTLINE PROGRAM FOR ASSOCIATION

Arrange Five Township Meetings in County to Discuss Clean County Plan.

Five meetings have been arranged for the campaign in Rock county to obtain sufficient signatures for the testing of all cattle in the county to eradicate bovine tuberculosis before the holiday period. It is hoped to have the entire county covered by township and more than 80 per cent of the cattle owners on the petition will make the test obligatory on every farm.

The time being worked out is to have two men appointed for each school district in the township, who will be thoroughly acquainted with the test requirements and the methods of payment on reactor cattle, to make the farm-to-farm canvass. A town-ship leader is to complete a town-ship in a day's time.

The time being short, the authorities hope to have the petitions ready to be presented by January 1, 1923. With so many applications on file in Rock county there is little opportunity that the federal testing working this district will be able to take on new records for many months. He is kept busy making records and keeping up the schedule.

It is planned to present the county-wide petitions, if sufficient signatures are obtained, early enough to guarantee that there will be enough indemnity money to cover losses and allow the state and federal departments to shift their testers from the northern counties to Rock county during the winter months to make a quick clean-up throughout the county. It is difficult for the testers to work in northern counties during January and February because of poor travel conditions. It is hoped that a force of testers can be put to work on a schedule that will complete the work in all the county in a month or six weeks.

Motion pictures will be shown at the meetings in the townships and rural centers and talks given by Dr. Arthur Kilgus, Wisconsin livestock commissioner. The meetings will be arranged as follows: Footville, Dec. 11, for Center township; Avon, Dec. 12, for Bradford township; Evansville, Dec. 14, for Union and West Porter townships; Harmony, Dec. 15, for Harmony township; Hanover, Dec. 18, for Plymouth township.

EXPERT ON BEAUTY SAYS IT HELPS HER

"Three bottles of Tanlac quickly relieved me of the tortures of indigestion, and I am always ready to give it my highest praise," declared Miss Ceilina Conrad, 412 Wells St., Milwaukee, Wis. Miss Conrad is an expert in beauty culture and is very popular with a wide circle of acquaintances.

"My stomach trouble was so bad for two years," she said, "that I often thought I could not pull through. The attacks and the dreadful pains that went with them actually made me feel stiff all over, and I had to sit in one position a long time. I could hardly walk from one room to another, and gas on my stomach, cramps and heartburn kept me in agony. My appetite was just forced down. Even that acted like poison and I kept getting worse, lost much weight and was terribly worried. The results I have received from Tanlac are wonderful. I have gained in weight, have a hearty appetite and everything agrees with me. My sleep used to be restless and broken, but now I sleep soundly every night. I am full of energy, able to attend to a great deal more work. My faith in Tanlac is greater than words can express."

Tanlac is sold by all good druggists.

"The Rock county club won national attention and was a worthy place of work," stated Earl Cooper, county health officer. "Occasionally Rock county is moving ahead. Breeds of cattle are in active competition for their right place. There is no better way to help the association than supplying the junior clubs with only the best calves for it directly reflects back on the county and the broader, supplying the calves. Judge Cooper recently declared that the Rock county Holstein club members were 'the best in the show ring of any club in the United States.'"

"We should advertise our breed without fighting other breeds," Cooper urged cow testing association work and a constructive system in junior club work, whereby the members may carry on their clubs and the calves have been shown as junior or senior animals.

Meetings will be held among the directors the first Tuesday of the month, in the afternoon, during the winter months and in the evenings during the summer period.

"Set up objective and work together" was the slogan advanced by the directors.

During the last year the association accomplished all that was outlined in its program. Next year the program will be enlarged and an effort made to make all members take part in active interest in the carrying out of the program. An early start will be made in the selecting and fitting of Holstein for the Rock county show herds and a committee laid to bring forth more high record cows through increased use of better sires and the culling of the herds through testing associations.

At all in the Rock county Holstein association indicated a firm resolve to get busy boosting the county to a top peak through constructive organized work.

CITY IR PUMPING WATER EFFICIENTLY

Cost Only 7.7 Cents Per Thousand Gallons, Report from Jan. 1 Shows.

Janesville's municipally owned water works is efficient. It costs only 7.7 cents to pump a thousand gallons of water, according to a statement of the department of the costs of operation and the revenues for the first nine months of 1922. The report shows the average daily consumption for that period to have been slightly in excess of 2,000,000 gallons or a total of 550,757,719 gallons pumped from January 1 to October 1, of which 359,182,424 gallons passed through meters and 191,575,295 gallons were chargeable at flat rate.

The total operating cost per million gallons is figured at $7.73, of which the pumping formed the biggest item, $4.56. The balance of $3.17 is distributed as follows: Distribution, $1.43; commercial, $2.32; general, $1.44; undistributed, $2.71; depreciation, $1.47; and taxes, $15.55.

Assets Total $670,000. The total assets on October 1 are given as $670,000, with liabilities amounting to $277,728.

Revenues from metered services in the nine months period totaled $49,505.22; flat rate, $5,223.47; hydrant, $1,789.30; and miscellaneous, $1,789.30, making total revenues of $58,307.39.

Expenses totaled $52,510, while additional deductions of $3,000 for payments on the funded debt make the net income for that period $1,447.63. This, Supt. H. A. Griffen says, is not indicative of the actual net income as there are included in the expenses a number of bills for water materials and repairs which the department will be reimbursed when taxes are collected. The final report for 1922 will show a net income much in excess of $2,000, he believes.

Not examination of children who were exposed to scarlet fever, proving that a daily inspection, with exclusion of children who have colds, or other ailments, is much better, both from the children's not losing time in school, and also from the point of view of the school boards, than the closing down of schools.

DID WOMEN GET MORE THAN A BARGAIN?

Decision of the supreme court of the state that women will be held as individuals in the same responsibilities as men will be rather disconcerting to the advocates of the women's rights law which was passed by the last legislature of Wisconsin. The law itself which has been accepted as a model by a number of organizations in other states, was declared to be the final answer in severing all the shackles from women which had heretofore placed them in any way at a disadvantage with men. Some of those who opposed the law and brought down the wrath of feminists because of that attitude, held that the law deprived women of many of the rights of exemption, while to make her "fully equal" with the male was in fact to take away rather than add to her prerogatives. It now seems that it is under the decision of the state supreme court and that the common law principle that women cannot make separate contracts has been abrogated.

The case, as told in the news dispatches in the Gazette, Tuesday, was that of a woman who had signed a promissory note with her husband. Under the common law her property would have been exempt but under the statute of the state as now written, she has been held equally liable with her husband. There will be other questions of importance interpreting the law to arise from time to time but the supreme court decision seems to cover many contentions, not before it but likely to come up, when it declares that the "disabilities" which occupied the common law interpretation and protection of the courts of equity, no longer exist and the liabilities of married women, contracted or otherwise, may be enforced as similar laws are enforced against men.

There are some questions as to dowry rights and division of property to be settled. The law will provide a fertile field for litigation involving revolutionary changes in application of the common law. Students will have many things to leave out of the old text books when it comes to differentiations once so important, in the relations of male and female to both rights real and personal.

IRELAND AS A FREE STATE.

History has been made in Ireland in the last year. Recognition of the Irish Free State and the appointment of Tim Healy, one of the noted leaders of the long parliamentary fight for Irish autonomy, as governor-general, has been the final step in the establishment of an orderly self government. It may be expected, with such recognition, that Ireland will make a decided effort to pacify all factions. It is hardly possible that the United States will ever be willing to accept a government dominated by South Ireland but that situation can be met. It is the irreconcilable like De Valera, who have been the most dangerous to Irish peace and a settled condition in Ireland. What the attitude of his faction will be, may be easily guessed. It will not be their part to accept the present status but under the new authority now established, the Free State will be able to more efficiently cope with attempts at overthrowing the new government. The British have no longer other than an academic interest in the local affairs of Ireland and none so far as keeping the peace is concerned in the employment of British constabulary or other military units. It seems the day of the British garrison after some 300 years, has gone forever in Ireland.

Apparently Gov. Blaine thought it was a green Melon he was slashing.

Congressman James R. Mann, who has just passed away, was a good party man. He knew all the tricks of debate, all the articles of floor management and was a hard man to fight on the floor of the House of Representatives. He lost his great influence when he tried to use all these arts as a leader of the minority in opposing the entrance of the United States into the war against the Central Powers. But he was also a member with a fund of information that others were pleased to use. There are many speeches—hundreds of them—credited in the record to others, furnished by Mann. The greatest tribute that could have been paid him was Uncle Joe Cannon standing by his coffin with tears flowing down his cheeks unchecked, stricken by the loss of a comrade of 25 years. The power of Jim Mann was in the friendships he made and the love his fellows had for him.

Women's rights have invaded Doorn and the trousers have been indicated by the former Kaiser.

Who says the world is not growing better? In the Gazette "20 years ago" column Tuesday it was noted that the city was just recovering from a "recent bad storm." That does not begin to tell the story of that time—the trains were tied up, wires were down and business came to a standstill on that December 4 and 5 in 1902. Look what we have here now—pansies blooming in the 7th ward and other things to be thankful for.

Cool supply this year will save many a house from being destroyed by an overheated furnace.

Governor Edwards, elected senator from New Jersey, told his audience at a luncheon in New York that he was going down to Washington "to

National Finger Print System

By FREDERIC J. HASKIN

Washington.—There has been so much talk about finger prints as a means of identification that it would seem as if everyone must know something about the subject. Detectives, however, shy that general knowledge of finger print science is vague, and that a good deal of what people believe about it is inaccurate.

This is said to be true even of police officials who regularly deal with identification problems. The question of finger prints arises in almost every big crime mystery and we might think that every official and employee engaged in ferreting out criminals would be keenly aware of the importance of prints. But are they? Far from it.

H. M. Wilder and Bert Wentworth, in an elaborate exposition on the subject of identification, point out a practically ideal situation which exists in Lyons, France. When a report is made to police headquarters that a murder or robbery has been committed, instant orders go out that nothing is to be done until the prints of the criminals have been taken. The prints are then sent out at once to study the premises for prints left on windows, door knobs, weapons, walls.

In contrast to this these experts give a story of this country. A prosecuting attorney picked up a razor used in a crime, rubbed his hand along the handle to brush off the dust, and asked a finger print expert in all seriousness if he could find any significant prints on it.

These contrasting stories show a fundamental difference in attitude towards a crime. The police chief at Lyons takes it for granted that every crime may become a two-pronged mystery and he approaches it as such. His carefulness about finger prints and removal of objects may turn out to be altogether unnecessary. The criminal may be quickly discovered. But he believes in preparation.

Only too often the American attitude seems to be to regard a crime as no mystery at all until it actually proves itself such. Then skilled detectives are set feverishly to work on stale clues, and there is generally a great deal of fuss made over the fact that innumerable people have touched everything about the scene of the crime. It is practically impossible then to do much with finger prints, and yet suddenly finger prints become the most sought after clue. But in the next mystery, the same sequence of events occurs.

This is all the harder to understand when you consider that finger prints are authoritatively regarded as the final proof of identity. Experienced detectives admit that they are sometimes deceived by likeness between two individuals and that on the other hand a disguise or the lapse of time may so change a person's appearance that he is not recognized by his own friends. But finger prints do not change, and that two persons should have identical finger prints is said to be virtually impossible. Even the prints on twins can readily be distinguished.

Out of the 6,000,000 prints filed by the Army and the 4,000,000 filed by the navy, no duplicates have ever been found. Nor is there any record from other sources of any discovery of duplicates. This is possible because not only is there wide variety in the general designs, but also in the ridges of which the pattern is made up. These ridges, which appear smooth and regular to the naked eye, show distinct characteristics when a print is put under a microscope. Lines are shown to be broken and forked in individual ways. Ridges vary in depth and distinctness.

The importance of all this variation is obvious when difficult questions of identity arise. The most famous example is that of two offenders in the penitentiary at Leavenworth, Kansas. When one of the men was brought before officials, the other instantly spoke with the idea that a prisoner had escaped. The prisoner was found in his cell, however, and brought out to be compared with the new inmate. They were as much alike as the proverbial twins. Though they were not related both had the same family name and similar Christian names. But their finger prints were entirely different.

Galton, who was a pioneer student of finger printing, estimated that there are 64,000,000,000 possible patterns. Compare this with the number of people in the world, less than 1,600,000,000 and you get an idea of the infinite variety of the designs. Since Galton's time progress has been made in analyzing prints, and modern experts give the chances of two people having identical prints as one in an unreadable number containing 61 digits.

The suggestion that prints might be forged has been met with the answer that this is practically impossible. Under a powerful lens a patched-up print would not deceive an expert.

The other suggested means of creating the finger print system—destroying prints—is also dismissed by Mr. Wilder as unlikely to be tried often. In a classified collection of prints all the fingers are recorded. Thus to lose one's finger print identity all the fingers would have to be disfigured, because one print left would be a significant clue. And not only would all the fingers have to be burned, but they would have to be burned so deeply that the ridges would not form again. This would mean a good deal of pain. Burns so deep would also mean that the delicate sense of touch would be practically destroyed. And finally, a person so disfigured would be conspicuously marked, a situation strictly avoided by the fugitive from the law.

The processes of taking prints of individuals and photographing prints left on objects may sound simple enough, but to really do the work is exacting and expert knowledge is necessary if the prints are to be used for any serious purpose. Analyzing and classifying prints is extremely complicated.

Finger printing has come into widest use as an aid to scientific detection of crime. Now attempts are being made to put the system to other uses. The idea of making forgery more difficult by having bank checks signed not only with a person's name but also with his finger prints has been tried. The Army and Navy check up on deserters, who try to re-enlist, and otherwise keep close track of their men by complete finger print systems.

It has been suggested that all artists should sign their works with a thumb print and thus make life less easy for the large and flourishing school of art forgers. Like a number of other proposals dealing with finger prints this idea has never been put into practice.

Mr. Wilder raises hell. "I'll raise so much hell that somebody will do something." All of which reminds one of the old saw that "talk is cheap but it takes money to buy whiskey." Even the kind Gov. Edwards wants to lose. Also that everybody wants "somebody to do something."

About the only sensible reason for divorce is one on the ground of economy.

Premier Mussolini probably feels his oats at this time over the seeming ease with which he is playing the game of "Simon says thumbs up" and everything is coming his way. But the way of all dictators is the way of thorns and the end is invariably the same. Too much of the dictator inspires jealousies and ambitions. And here intrigue begins. The king of Italy has never been so much of a puppet as now. He is less a king than George V of Great Britain. Mussolini is the real king and autocrat beyond anything we have seen in Europe for a long time. His task is enormous, his way rough.

A Tennessee pig, drunk, led officers to a still. The pig furnished the house all right, and while the pork was picked it was not blind.

HIS SERVICE.

He would have said: "I've never done a thing. When brains were handed out I wasn't there; Some fellows write and some are born to sing. And others climb in planes and ride the air."

"God made me out of odds and ends, I guess. The leavings from a batch of clay He used; I seem to lack the genius for success. By which the world might gain or be amused."

"There wasn't any flavoring of skill. Nearby when life could drop into the mold, I was the bit of pastry, fashioned ill. That's given to the children when it's cold."

He couldn't write or paint or make a speech. Nothing he's done has ever brought him fame. He had no gifts the heights of life to reach. Yet he shall be remembered just the same.

His years were filled with kindly little deeds. He gave, cheered, helped and comforted and soothed.

His was the service life so often needs. In little ways the rugged paths he smoothed. He'd take the burdens from you with a smile. And still it nothing in his modest way. He thought success was brilliancy or style. And kindness but the duty of the day.

THE COMMONPLACE MAN.

"I am only a commonplace man."—Prime Minister Bonar Law.

A commonplace man? Well, what of that? The commonplace man has built the earth. That's no excuse, we will tell you flat. It's the commonplace man who proves his worth.

Abraham Lincoln and U. S. Grant, Benjamin Franklin and Bonaparte, Victor Hugo, Du Maurier, Maupassant, All won out with a humble start.

David Lloyd George and Clemenceau, Thomas A. Edison, James J. Hill, Chris Columbus, Galileo, Black Jack Pershing and Buffalo Bill.

P. T. Barnum and James C. Blaine, Lewis and Clark and Daniel Boone, Samuel Pepys and Old Mark Twain, Pipi, Disraeli and John Calhoun.

Were I a Briton, this parlous day, And wished for the safety of the race, I'd thank my stars if I heard you say That you are a man who is "commonplace."

Harvard professor says more married men than bachelors suffer from heart trouble. True enough, if they hadn't suffered from heart trouble they wouldn't be married.

Who's Who Today

PIERCE BUTLER.

Pierce Butler, nominated to fill the vacancy made by the resignation of Justice W. R. Day of the United States supreme court, was admitted to the bar when he was 22 years old. He is now 36. After three years of law practice in his native state of Minnesota, he became assistant state attorney of Ramsey county and was elected state attorney two years later. He served four years and then retired to enter general practice.

During his years as a member of the firm of Powell, Butler & Mitchell, St. Paul, Mr. Butler has been retained by some of the biggest corporations in the country. He was retained by an important group of railroads to look after their interests in connection with the federal legislation providing for the valuation of railroads, and in this capacity became a leading authority on railroad questions. About two years ago he was retained by the government of Canada to determine the counsel in the proceeding to determine the value of the Grand Trunk Pacific railroad should be paid for its properties when taken over by the government.

Mr. Butler was appointed special counsel for the government in 1910 by Attorney General George W. Wickersham in the prosecution of the Chicago meat packers, under indictment for violation of the Sherman act. The jury acquitted the defendants, but the attorney general paid high tribute to Mr. Butler's management of the case.

Mr. Butler is married and has seven children living. Three of his boys served in the World war.

LOOKING BACKWARD

FORTY YEARS AGO

Dec. 6, 1882.—The result of the special election held yesterday to ascertain the views of the people on the question of building water works. As follows: Against, 633; For, 394. The fourth ward (West) strongest against. Women of the town working for a library, have raised more than $300, which will maintain a free library and teaching room for almost a year.

THIRTY YEARS AGO

Dec. 6, 1892.—Although Matthew Ashton has been arrested for the murder of Mrs. Daniel Stow, the murder is still a mystery. Mayor O. D. Rowe gave a message to the council last night, the substance of which was that Janesville needs and should have a police force. The marshal cannot take care of the work, which needs five men and a chief.

TWENTY YEARS AGO

Dec. 6, 1902.—Thirty men are now staying at a local hotel, and working on the Western Union wires which were blown down in the recent storm. Seniors entertained the football team with banquet at East Side Odd Fellows hall last night. H. Stow Lovejoy is president of the class. These on the committee which made the affair a social event seldom equalled even by adults, were Kramer Doty, Elizabeth McHenry, Harold Hall, Josephine Fenton and Harry Doran.

Noted Physician and Author

BRONCHIAL DILATATIONS

Among the many quibulations of persons with the "catarrh" delusion, probably this is the one most overlooked. "My trouble," writes a reader who evidently is confused by the terms of this department, "is enlargement of the muscles of the heart brought on by an attack of acute bronchitis last winter. The doctor said I could not avoid further attacks by not getting more cold. Will you please send me your monograph on heart trouble?"

"I have no monograph on heart trouble. I should advise the patient to follow his doctor's instructions as to the care of the heart. Even though the doctor only passes the duck, that would be safer counsel than anything the patient might obtain by correspondence. It is possible that the doctor made that little quibble about 'not getting more cold' deliberately and with benevolence, afterthought, for good doctors often lie. It is a humane act to punish your best friend when he is wildly struggling and handicapping your effort to rescue him from drowning. So I say there are conceivable circumstances in which a doctor may be paying for advice 'not to get more cold,' provided the doctor turns the fee over to a conscience fund."

It is beyond my small ken how acute bronchitis could have brought on hypertrophy of the heart, or any other heart trouble, but what I don't know about bronchitis fills many ponderous tomes. Chronic bronchitis is frequently associated with emphysema, which is a condition of the lungs in which the air sacs are enlarged and the elasticity of the lungs is lost. In other words, the lungs are unable to contract and expel the air. This is a dangerous condition, and the patient should be under the care of a physician. The doctor's advice to "not get more cold" is a reasonable one, as colds can exacerbate the condition.

Broken Capillaries.
Please let me know the cause and cure for broken capillaries on the nose. (P. M.)
Answer.—They are not capillaries (which are really too minute to be distinguished except under a microscope), but are merely very small veins. I do not know the cause. They may be obliterated by the electric needle in skilled hands.

Valvular Leakage.
I am 32 years old, 66½ inches tall and weigh 134 pounds, striped. This was twice the weight of my examiners in the course of the war because of a valvular heart leakage. But I still have my doubts for the past summer in eleven seconds. I wonder whether it would be justifiable for me to marry? (D. P. W.)
Answer.—If you can do a hundred yards in 11 seconds, it ought to be safe enough for you to marry. You should be a year old child to sleep on a feather bed or feather tick. (Mrs. L. L.)
Answer.—Yes, in winter.

On the Feathers.

(Any reader can get the answer to any question by writing the Gazette Information Bureau, Washington, D. C., and enclosing a stamp for postage.)

Q. Under American Golf association rules, on the second shot, I shoot out of bounds and drop a ball and shoot another. What am I shooting then? C. D. A.

A. The rule says that if a ball lies out of bounds the player shall play his next stroke as nearly as possible at the spot from which the ball which is out of bounds was played, under penalty of stroke and distance. How long to sea cables last? O. T. L.

A. The life of a deep sea cable, aside from injuries by ship's anchors, rocks, sharks, and other dangers, has been variously estimated as from 20 to 40 years.

Q. When was the first tomb built in a church? W. N.

A. The Emperor Constantine, who died in 337, is supposed to have been the first to be buried in a church. This was done in the Church of the Apostles at Constantinople, of which he was the founder.

Q. Wasn't there a mystery about the death of Aaron Burr's daughter? W. R.

A. Theodosia Burr, or Mrs. Joseph Alston, sailed from Charleston for New York in 1812 in the Swallow, but the vessel never was heard of again. It was believed to have been lost in a storm or sunk by pirates.

Q. What is a hushwhacker?

A. Hushwhacker is a term applied during the civil war to men living in the states where military operations were carried on by those who professed to be neutrals and to be solely occupied in their ordinary vocations, but who seized opportunities to harbor or aid the rebels.

Q. How are California grapes classified? H. H.

A. Grapes grown in California may be divided into three groups, classified as table grapes, wine grapes and raisin grapes. The table grapes, namely varieties suitable to be eaten as fresh fruit, may be placed in two categories, poor shipping and good shipping. Many of the poor shipping are better for eating than the good shipping. The term wine grapes refers to a large number of varieties of grapes. These grapes generally have small berries whose juice can be easily extracted and which possess a neutral or more or less pronounced flavor. They are especially suitable for the manufacture of grape juices.

SYNOPSIS OF PRECEDING CHAPTERS

Pandora Nicholson is so painfully shy and self-conscious that it is almost agony for her to go into a room in which there are strangers. She believes her self to be one of the stupidest people alive. Her Aunt Maude has recently told her so. She cannot mix with the youthful society of Janesville. She cannot enter into their merry-making.

She lives with her father, Jim Nicholson, as a poor relation in the home of a fine prosperous brother, Peter, his wife, Aunt Maude, and their daughter, Gladys. Unexpectably, she makes one friend, Morton Newberry, a shy and studious lad whom Gladys dislikes. They return one day from a walk to find Gladys in a furious temper.

A FURIOUS LADY

Chapter 14

It never occurred to Dora that anyone would slight the very popular Gladys. She knew, after the experience of last Sunday, that Gladys would resent this insult, or rather this neglect, furiously.

She worried over it so much, she could not sleep during the night, and at last plucked up courage to ask:

"Didn't you want to dance with her?"

"With who?" Morton asked.

"Gladys? Did she want to dance? I didn't know."

So it had been an oversight!

But as she thought about it over some days after the dance was over, it seemed still more amazing. Morton paid no attention to Gladys at all!

Moreover, as the days went by, he did pay more and more attention to her. A shy little friendship had begun, something new and infinitely precious to the lonely, misunderstood girl.

She tried once or twice to write down things Morton said to her in the little diary—but the words looked so common place written there that they out, and never made another attempt to set down conversation in writing.

It's his voice and the way he says things, she told herself once, and by this ingenious method, convinced herself that he had said something worth listening to.

Gladys was furious.

"That's the last time I try to be nice to you," she declared viciously the day after the dance.

"Here I went across the room, and gave him a perfectly good chance to ask me to dance and the boob would take it!"

This was to her mother, when they were at work in the living room sewing.

"Well, I wouldn't worry," Aunt Maude answered placidly. "There's plenty more anxious enough to dance with you. I don't want to be vain, but I must say it's a satisfaction to have a daughter that's popular."

Dora, busy in the next room, of course, heard all this.

"There's Jesse," Aunt Maude began.

"Jesse?" came impatiently from Gladys. "I'm getting tired of Jesse."

"Why, I'm sure he's always been most devoted," Aunt Maude began again.

"Yes, he's always under my feet," the girl replied, with greater impatience.

"Now, a clever person might have seen many interesting things at this point of view. But Aunt Maude was not clever and Dora dared not be.

Gladys, to amuse herself, gave another party, and asked everyone but Norton who, of course, heard all about the affair. Dora, having no say in the giving of parties, couldn't even suggest him.

It was rather an awful evening, for the girl. She had the same trouble—not knowing what to do with her hands, feeling her feet much too big, not being able to join in the quick talk, the gossip, the jokes and laughter of the others.

Gladys should have enjoyed this party immensely. But she was so short tempered after it as she had been before.

It was the end of February now, almost the first of March.

Uncle Peter began to talk of Spring plowing—and mending the roof of the carriage house and building a new chicken yard.

"Time we were moving out there," Aunt Maude agreed. "I want to start some garden stuff under a frame this week, and it might as well get that farm house cleaned. It's always a mess after Joe's wife looks after it."

Gladys pouted and said nothing. Jim, as usual, went to the farm for his daily duties and came back every night for supper. Dora was trying to do some sewing.

One day Dora heard a long discussion going on in the living room between Gladys and her mother. Gladys' voice came to her, but no words, for the door was shut tight.

That night Aunt Maude announced: "Peter, I think Jim and Dora can sit out tonight. I don't feel like moving just yet."

"Why you were so anxious to go?"

"I know, I changed my mind," Aunt Maude said hurriedly, her face reddening. "You can go if it's too much work to come back every day. Dora can look after you."

"There's too much work for one woman," Peter objected.

A scout silenced him—the usual sort of frown by which a wife silently conveys to her husband information that he is saying or doing the wrong thing.

"Oh I can manage," Dora murmured, her heart sinking at the idea but anxious only to keep everyone in a good temper. Gladys smiled a little to herself.

Dinner Stories

"I must say, cook," said the lady of the house, "that of late your work has been very satisfactory. Before you could continue, cook, broke in with: 'Thank you kindly, mum. I've been here three months now and though I've tried my best, that's the first bit of praise I've had since I've been here.'—The Morning Post.

The Graphic says a little Missy girl was told that polite people did not talk about their ailments in company, or outside the family. So when a visitor asked her if she was well, she said, 'Well, in the family, I have the stomach ache, but in company I am quite well, thank you.'—Kansas Notes, Kansas City Star.

An alibi was sprung by ex-Senator Jonathan Bourne of Oregon in a game at the Waverley course in Portland some years ago. He was partnered in a four-ball match with the late Wirt Minor, well-known and beloved by all Pacific Northwest golfers.

The senator after executing a rotation shot which lost his ball in the deep woods, turned impatiently to Wirt and rasped out, 'Wirtle, old man, how many times have I told you where to stand when I play?'

Minor replied, 'Why, Jonathan, I stood squarely behind you, back; neither I nor my caddy moved or spoke, and I kept my eyes on the back of your head. Anything the matter with that?'

But the senator was versed in political argument and came back at once with 'All right for the drive, old man, but not for the approach.'—Judge.

Community Comment

FLORENCE SLOW HIDE, Editor.

This department of the Janesville Daily Gazette is published in the interest of all Community work in Southern Wisconsin.

THE SCHOOL BUILDING IS IDEAL COMMUNITY CENTER.

Using the school house as a community center is not a new departure, but rather a revival of a practice that was quite universal in pioneer days, when singing schools, literary and debating societies, spelling bees, political and religious meetings were held frequently in every school district.

With the growth and development of village and city life the school building and the automobile and the telephone, the unit of community life has been changed.

In villages and cities the school building is no longer the center of the community. The problem of safe recreation for the young. All of the newer types of high school buildings have special center facilities, while many communities have already had high school buildings.

High school buildings have found it feasible to erect a separate social center building. This seems to be a better plan than the erection of an independent community house in the average town, even though the necessary funds are raised by subscription. Dr. T. B. Hieronymus, community adviser of the University of Wisconsin, has been successful in growing out of years of close observation, that the proper management of a community center is often a larger problem than the getting of the building itself.

Some Good Examples.

Southern Wisconsin has a number of school buildings that are being used as community social centers. The gymnasium in the high school building at Edgerton is used regularly by twenty groups outside the school.

The use of public buildings in Edgerton having facilities for banquets, community suppers and social gatherings. It does not, however, afford adequate facilities for the holding of large groups outside the school.

Edgerton has a building in which they have already drawn in the direction of giving their boys and girls a square deal. They will find a way to erect a structure that will be a school property, but will be used for the holding of public taxation or private subscription.

The Union high school of Milton and Milton Junction is one of the most interesting of rural types of affording community center facilities. The building, erected in 1920, cost with equipment about $50,000. It has a gym which may also be used as an auditorium, a combination feature that is found quite generally in the newer types of buildings. A number of school societies supply practically all of the social life of the school. Social events and fairs are held frequently. Farm Bureau meetings and institutes are held here.

An active parent-teacher association meets regularly and sponsors health programs, educational lectures, etc. The Gazette desires reports of activities carried on in connection with all school communities in Southern Wisconsin, and the community editor is prepared to furnish suggestions as to suitable activities and entertainments. Information cleared from different parts of the country including government bulletins will be furnished to school officers or community leaders who desire to inaugurate a movement for a school social center.

Will Speak at Evansville.

The W. C. T. U. and Parent-Teacher association of Evansville are co-operating in a community meeting to be held in that city Friday afternoon, Dec. 8, for which occasion the community editor has been invited to speak on the subject of "School Social Centers." The December issue of Social Progress, a child welfare and social betterment magazine published in Chicago, contains an article on this subject by Mrs. Hyde. Mention is given in this article to Edgerton and Union high schools.

THE THIRTEENTH BABY

Recently the community editor, while spending a day with the county nurse, had the privilege of talking in a farm home where the nurse had just arrived. Two old girls remained home from school temporarily to do the housework, and three children under school age were in evidence. Never the less, the nurse seemed as proud of the 13th baby as any woman who gazes at her first-born. It was only by the most tactful questioning that Mrs. Hyde elicited the information that it had been possible to provide the newcomer with only the most meager of layettes. Loving hands had fashioned tiny shirts from flannel and because the supports of 12 children in the most hard-working of tenant farmers in those days of low prices for farm products and high prices for everything the farmer buys, left no margin for the purchase of new-made wool knit garments. Because there are in Rock county rural women's clubs that provide infant layettes for the county nurse to distribute wherever the mother is discovered, she has with the little sheets, but a number of other articles that will make life a bit easier for the baby and mother, who according to the nurse, are at least from Rock county down, is rendering to her country the highest service that any human being can render, would not for a moment have thought of asking the county nurse or anyone else to give her anything at all, preferring rather to contribute as best she could to care for the new baby's needs. On the other hand, it is not all so simple as it seems. The community to recognize the service of such a mother by making it possible for her burden to be lightened even so little by friendly gifts from those who are not so busy as she is, is the nation in this particular direction. The wise men brought gifts to the Christ-child, whose advent into the world exalted motherhood and babyhood in the eyes of the world. The wise men brought gifts to the Christ-child, whose advent into the world exalted motherhood and babyhood in the eyes of the world. The wise men brought gifts to the Christ-child, whose advent into the world exalted motherhood and babyhood in the eyes of the world.

Large families are rare enough in these days, as are mothers who face the advent of the 13th baby cheerfully. The advanced thought of the present day is all in favor of quality, rather than quantity, so they tell us. Doubtless in many instances a large family means that the training and education of the children are not given the attention and advantages that are considered essential in these days. It does seem a way to share the love of parents of the first appeal for charity. At any rate, there was something about the long all-night covered by the nurse, who had been in the home into which the 13th baby had come, that reminded one of the homes of a generation or more ago, when the mother was the foundation on which is built the present glory and greatness of the nation.

HEART AND HOME

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I am a girl of 21. There is a young man of about 21 years whom I am crazy about, but I think he likes another girl who is a telephone operator. She calls him up very often. I am sure he does not love me, except when he sneezes and they are very friendly. This boy comes to see me often, although I live four or five miles away.

Please tell him that I don't think he likes me or not and tell me how to win him over. Does he like this other girl?

DESIROUS TO KNOW.

The fact that the young man goes to see you often should satisfy you, because if he did not like you he would stay away. Accept him as a friend and do not try to force him to express the extent of his liking by saying that he loves you. A young man of 21 is rarely in a position to marry and therefore he prefers not to think of such a thing until nearer the time when marriage becomes possible.

Don't worry a minute about the girl who telephones him. She has little chance of really standing in his favor, because she runs after him. He may like her well enough to talk to her over the phone and be pleasant when they meet, but I doubt if he is interested further.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: To the ANXIOUS PARENT who made inquiry in your paper for something to rid the child's hair of lice and nit, will you please give the following: I have tried and proved: Rub a little kerosene on the scalp and let remain for about two hours. Then wash the hair good to get kero-

those who are not so careful, may find need of these two recipes, and I certainly know they give the desired results. If I see these in print I will send more.

Thank you for your kind interest. The recipes you have sent will certainly be of use to many mothers. They are simple and I know, too, that they are effective. These will be kept on file for future use and I will be glad to have more remedies which you have tried.

Get from the drugist a little carbolic acid. To one teaspoon of warm lard mix one tablespoon of carbolic acid and rub a little on the person's body each night until well, which will be in about a week. Then a good soapy bath, and generally the itch is gone. Should the body show signs of its returning, use again, but the second trial is very seldom needed.

straight bobbed hair, it would probably improve the condition of your hair greatly to have it cut. But if you plan to curl the hair, you may be sure that you would only split the ends and injure the hair further. Talk to some one in a beauty parlor and be advised whether or not bobbed hair would be becoming.

MOTHER.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I am a girl of 18. My hair is quite uneven. Would you advise me to have it bobbed so that it will grow even?
